Introduction

At The Wilnecote School our governors, strategic leadership team and all staff are committed to the prevention, early identification, and appropriate management of child-on-child abuse both within and beyond the school.

We believe that in order to protect children, all schools should:

- be aware of the nature and level of risk to which their students are or may be exposed, and put in place a clear and comprehensive strategy which is tailored to their specific safeguarding context;
- take a whole-school community 'Contextual Safeguarding' approach to preventing and responding to child-on-child abuse.

As a school we are committed to:

- tackling child-on-child abuse proactively, focusing on:
 - systems and structures;
 - prevention;
 - identification;
 - response/intervention;
- recognising and responding to the increasing national concern about this issue in order to mitigate harmful attitudes and child-on-child abuse in the school setting;
- encouraging parents to work in partnership with us on this issue, so that if their child is feeling unsafe as a result of the behaviour of any of their peers, they inform the school so that we can ensure that appropriate and prompt action is taken in response.

This policy:

- is the school's overarching policy for any issue that could constitute child-on-child abuse. It relates to, and should be read alongside our Child Protection and Safeguarding Policy and any other relevant policies including the behaviour, anti-bullying, online safety and exclusions policies;
- sets out our strategy for preventing and identifying and managing child-on-child abuse;
- applies to all members of our school community. It is reviewed biennially and updated in the interim, as required, to ensure that it continually addresses the risks to which students are or may be exposed;
- recognises that abuse is abuse and should never be passed off as 'banter', 'just having a laugh', or 'part of growing up';
- is compliant with the latest statutory guidance on peer- on-peer abuse as set out in Keeping Children Safe in Education;
- does not use the term 'victim' and/or 'perpetrator'. This is because our school takes a safeguarding approach to all individuals involved in concerns or allegations about child-on-child abuse, recognising that many children who present with harmful behaviour towards others, in the context of child-on-child abuse, are themselves vulnerable and may have been victimised themselves prior to their abuse of peers;
- uses the terms 'child' and 'children', which is defined for the purposes of this policy as a person aged under 18.

- should, if relevant, be read in conjunction with the DfE's advice on Sexual Violence and Sexual Harassment Between Children in Schools and Colleges (DfE - May 2018), and any other advice and guidance referred to within it;
- should be read in conjunction with the Local Safeguarding Partnership's Safeguarding Policy and Procedures, and any relevant Practice Guidance issued by it.
- is in place to support and guide the response of the school to each individual case and is not a one size fits all solution that specifies action and intervention that will be taken.

Understanding child-on-child abuse

Child-on-child abuse is any form of physical, sexual, emotional and financial abuse and coercive control, exercised between children, and within children's relationships (both intimate and non-intimate), friendships and wider peer associations.

Child-on-child abuse can take various forms, including (but not limited to):

- Bullying in all forms, including cyberbullying, prejudice-based, and discriminatory bullying (such as misogyny or misandry);
- Hate incidents and hate crimes, which may also involve an online component;
- Abuse in intimate personal relationships between children (commonly referred to as "teenage relationship abuse"), which may also involve an online component;
- Physical abuse, including actions such as hitting, kicking, shaking, biting, hair pulling, or causing physical harm in other ways. This may also involve an online element that facilitates, threatens, or encourages such abuse;
- Initiation or hazing-related violence and rituals, which may involve harassment, abuse, or humiliation as a means of inducting someone into a group. This can also include an online component;
- Harmful Sexual Behaviour (HSB): Developmentally inappropriate sexual behaviour exhibited by children and young people that is harmful or abusive. HSB can take place online, face-to-face, or across both simultaneously. It may include acts such as sexual violence, sexual assault, sexual harassment, online sexual harassment, and behaviours rooted in misogyny or misandry;
- Consensual and non-consensual sharing of nude or semi-nude images and videos (commonly referred to as sexting or youth-produced sexual imagery)
- Upskirting which typically involves taking a picture under a person's clothing without them knowing, with the intention of viewing their genitals or buttocks to obtain sexual gratification, or cause the victim humiliation, distress or alarm.

What is Contextual Safeguarding?

All staff should consider the context within which incidents/behaviours occur. This is known as 'contextual safeguarding', which simply means assessments of children should consider whether wider environmental factors are present in a child's life that pose a threat to their safety or well-being.

This policy:

- (a) encapsulates a contextual safeguarding approach, which is about changing the way that professionals approach child protection when risks occur outside of the family, known as extra-familial harm.
- (b) adopts a whole-school community Contextual Safeguarding approach, which means:
 - being aware of the impact that these wider social contexts may be having on students;
 - creating a safe culture in the school by implementing policies and procedures that address child-on-child abuse, promoting healthy relationships and attitudes to gender/sexuality, hotspot-mapping to identify risky areas in school and training on potential bias and stereotyped assumptions;
 - being alert to and monitoring changes in students' behaviour and/or attendance;
 - contributing to local child protection agendas by, for example, challenging poor threshold decisions and referring concerns about contexts to relevant local agencies.

How prevalent is child-on-child abuse?

Research suggests that child-on-child abuse is one of the most common forms of abuse affecting children in the UK. In 2015, more than four in ten teenage schoolgirls aged between 13 and 17 in England had experienced sexual coercion, while two thirds of contact sexual abuse experienced by children aged 17 or under was committed by someone who was also aged 17 or under.¹

Sexual behaviours

The following continuum model² demonstrates the range of sexual behaviours presented by children, which may be helpful when seeking to understand a student's sexual behaviour and deciding how to respond to it.

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Developmentally expected • Socially acceptable • Consensual, mutual, reciprocal • Shared decision making 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Single instances of inappropriate sexual behaviour • Socially acceptable behaviour within peer group • Context for behaviour may be inappropriate • Generally consensual and reciprocal 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Problematic and concerning behaviour • Developmentally unusual and socially unexpected • No overt elements of victimisation • Consent issues may be unclear • May lack reciprocity or equal power • May include levels of compulsivity 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Victimising intent or outcome • Includes misuse of power • Coercion and force to ensure compliance • Intrusive • Informed consent lacking or not able to be freely given • May include elements of expressive violence 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Physically violent sexual abuse • Highly intrusive • Instrumental violence which is psychologically and/or sexually arousing to the child responsible for the behaviour • Sadism

This continuum relates exclusively to sexual behaviours and is not exhaustive. The Brook Sexual Behaviours Traffic Light Tool³ can also help professionals working with children to distinguish between three levels of sexual behaviour - green, amber and red, and to respond according to the level of concern.

How can a child who is being abused by peers be identified?

All staff should be alert to the well-being of students and to signs of abuse, and should engage with these signs, as appropriate, to determine whether they are caused by child-on-child abuse. However, staff should be mindful of the fact that the ways in which children will disclose or present with behaviours will differ as a result of their experiences.

Things to look out for that could be apparent in victims of child-on-child abuse:

- Regularly feeling sick or unwell in the morning;
- Reluctance to make the journey to and from school;
- Money or possessions going missing;
- Clothes or school bag torn;
- Wanting extra pocket money for no particular reason;
- Unexplained cuts and bruises;
- Taking different routes to school;
- Unexplained behaviour changes, e.g. moody, bad tempered, tearful;
- Unhappiness;
- Nightmares;
- Not wanting to leave the house;
- Reluctance to talk openly about school friends and break-times/lunch-times.

The school's safeguarding team should regularly review behaviour incident logs which can help to identify any changes in behaviour and/or concerning patterns or trends at an early stage.

If a parent thinks their child may be the victim of child-on-child abuse, they should contact the school as soon as possible to report the issues through the appropriate channels. Sometimes children do not report the issues to anyone in school.

Are some children particularly vulnerable to abusing or being abused by their peers?

Any child can be vulnerable to child-on-child abuse due to the strength of peer influence and staff should be alert to signs of such abuse amongst all children. Situational factors can increase a child's vulnerability to abuse by their peers. For example, an image of a child could be shared, following which they could become more vulnerable to child-on-child abuse due to how others now perceive them, regardless of any characteristics which may be inherent in them and/or their family.

Peer group dynamics can also play an important role in determining a child's vulnerability to such abuse. For example, children who are more likely to follow others and/or who are socially isolated from their peers may be more vulnerable to child-on-child abuse. Children who are questioning or exploring their sexuality may also be particularly vulnerable to such abuse.

Research suggests that:

- child-on-child abuse may affect boys differently from girls, which may result from societal norms rather than biological make-up. Barriers to disclosure will also be different.
- children with Special Educational Needs and/or Disabilities (SEND) are three times more likely to be abused than their peers without SEND, and additional barriers can sometimes exist when recognising abuse in children with SEND. These can include:
 - a) assumptions that indicators of possible abuse such as behaviour, mood and injury relate to a child's disability without further exploration;
 - b) the potential for children with SEND to be disproportionately impacted by behaviours such as bullying and harassment, without outwardly showing any signs;
 - c) communication barriers and difficulties;
 - d) overcoming these barriers.
- some children may be more likely to experience child-on-child abuse than others as a result of certain characteristics such as sexual orientation, ethnicity, race or religious beliefs.

A whole school approach

The school actively seeks to raise awareness of and prevent all forms of child-on-child abuse by:

- educating all governors, its strategic leadership team, staff, students and parents about this issue, including training on the nature, prevalence and effect of child-on-child abuse and how to prevent, identify and respond to it. This includes:
 - a) Contextual Safeguarding;
 - b) the identification of specific behaviours, including digital behaviours;
 - c) the importance of taking seriously all forms of child-on-child abuse and ensuring that no form of child-on-child abuse is ever dismissed as teasing or banter;
 - d) Social media and online safety, focusing on guiding children to use social media in a positive, safe, and responsible manner. This includes helping them identify and address abusive behaviour online, critically evaluate the content they encounter, and recognize and challenge negative influences.

- educating children about the nature and prevalence of child-on-child abuse, positive, responsible and safe use of social media, and the unequivocal facts about consent, via PSHE and the wider curriculum. They are regularly informed about the school's approach to such issues, including its zero-tolerance policy towards all forms of child-on-child abuse, whilst aware that how this may be tackled may differ from case to case.

- engaging parents on these issues by:
 - a) publicising the possible signs and symptoms of child-on-child abuse and encouraging them to report concerns to the school immediately;
 - b) encouraging parents to share the same values and expectations at home with their children, so young people understand what is and what is unacceptable and receive a consistent message from both home and school;
 - c) encouraging parents to work in partnership with us this issue, in part as a result of visibility of this policy;
 - d) encouraging parents to take responsibility to actively support, encourage and check upon the safe use of technologies and social media use by their children outside of school, to help reduce the likelihood of them becoming either a victim or perpetrator of child-on-child abuse through this medium.

- Supporting the ongoing welfare of the students by drawing on multiple resources that prioritise student mental health, and by providing in-school counselling to address underlying mental health needs.
- creating conditions in which our students can aspire to, and realise, safe and healthy relationships fostering a whole-school culture:
 - a) which is founded on the idea that every member of our school community is responsible for building and maintaining safe and positive relationships, and helping to create a safe school environment in which violence and abuse are never acceptable;
 - b) in which students are able to develop trusting relationships with staff and in which staff understand, through regular discussion and training, the importance of these relationships in providing students with a sense of belonging, which could otherwise be sought in problematic contexts;

- c) in which students feel able to share their concerns openly, in a non-judgmental environment, and have them listened to;
- responding to cases of child-on-child abuse promptly and appropriately;
- ensuring that all child-on-child abuse issues are fed back to the school's Safeguarding Team so that they can spot and address any concerning trends and identify students who may be in need of additional support.

Multi-agency working

The school actively engages with its Local Safeguarding Partnership in relation to child-on-child abuse and works closely with a range of external agencies in accordance with the Local Safeguarding Partnership's procedures.

The school actively refers concerns and allegations of child-on-child abuse where necessary to children's social care, the police and other relevant agencies in accordance with the Local Safeguarding Partnership's procedures.

Responding to concerns or allegations of child-on-child abuse

It is essential that all concerns and allegations of child-on-child abuse are handled sensitively, appropriately and promptly.

Our response will:

- include a thorough investigation of the concern(s) or allegation(s), and the wider context in which it/they may have occurred (as appropriate) - depending on the nature and seriousness of the alleged incident(s), it may be appropriate for the police and/or children's social care to carry out this investigation;
- treat all children involved as being at potential risk - while the child allegedly responsible for the abuse may pose a significant risk of harm to other children, s/he may also have considerable unmet needs and be at risk of harm themselves. The school should ensure that a safeguarding response is in place for both the child who has allegedly experienced the abuse, and the child who has allegedly been responsible for it, and additional sanctioning or intervention work may be required for the latter and can take a variety of forms;
- take into account that the abuse may indicate wider safeguarding concerns for any of the children involved, and consider and address the effect of wider sociocultural contexts such as the child's peer group, family, the school environment, the potential for victimisation in the local community and the child's online presence;
- Consider the potential complexity of child-on-child abuse and of children's experiences, and consider the interplay between power, choice and consent. While children may appear to be making choices, if those choices are limited they are not consenting;
- Adopt an intersectional approach, ensuring that adultification does not result in failing to recognise victims of child-on-child abuse, particularly those from ethnic minority groups;
- Obtain the views of the child/children affected. Unless it is considered unsafe to do so the DSL should discuss the proposed action with the child/children and their parents and obtain consent to any referral before it is made. The school should manage the child's expectations about information sharing, and keep them and their parents informed of developments, where appropriate and safe to do so. It is particularly important to take into account the wishes of any child who has allegedly been abused, and to give that child as much control as is reasonably possible over decisions regarding how any investigation will be progressed and how they will be supported, also considering their age, individual context and circumstances and whether they are 'Gillick Competent'.

What should you do if you suspect a child may be experiencing or involved in child-on-child abuse

If a member of staff thinks for whatever reason that a child may be at risk of or experiencing abuse by their peer(s), or that a child may be at risk of abusing or may be abusing their peer(s), they should discuss their concern with the DSL without delay, following the procedure detailed in the Child Protection and Safeguarding Policy, so that a course of action can be agreed.

Where a child is suffering, or is likely to suffer from harm, it is important that a referral to children's social care (and, if appropriate, the police) is made immediately. Anyone can make a referral. Where referrals are not made by the DSL, the DSL should be informed as soon as possible that a referral has been made.

If a child speaks to a member of staff about child-on-child abuse that they have witnessed or are a part of, the member of staff should listen to the child and use open language that demonstrates understanding rather than judgement.

How will the school respond to concerns or allegations of child-on-child abuse?

The DSL will discuss the concern(s) or allegation(s) with the member of staff who has reported it/them and will, where necessary, take any immediate steps to ensure the safety of the child/all children affected.

Where any concern(s) or allegation(s) indicate(s) that indecent images of a child or children may have been shared online, the DSL should consider what urgent action can be taken in addition to the actions and referral duties set out in this policy.

DSLs will always use their professional judgement to:

- a) assess the nature and seriousness of the alleged behaviour;
- b) determine whether it is appropriate for the alleged behaviour to be to be dealt with internally and, if so, whether any external specialist support is required. In borderline cases the DSL may wish to consult with children's social care and/ or other relevant agencies in accordance with the Local Safeguarding Partnership's procedures to determine the most appropriate response.

Where the DSL considers or suspects that the alleged behaviour in question might be abusive or violent or where the needs and circumstances of the individual child/children in question might otherwise require it, the DSL should contact children's social care and/or the police immediately and, in any event, within 24 hours of the DSL becoming aware of the alleged behaviour. The DSL will discuss the concern(s) or allegation(s) with the agency and agree on a course of action, which may include:

- a) Manage internally with help from external specialists where appropriate and possible. This would usually be where the alleged behaviour between peers is inappropriate or problematic, as opposed to abusive or violent. In such cases, utilising the behaviour policy and providing pastoral support may be the most appropriate route.
- b) Undertake/contribute to an inter-agency early help assessment, with targeted early help services provided to address the assessed needs of the child/children and their family. These services may, for example, include family and parenting programmes, responses to emerging thematic concerns in extra familial contexts, a specialist harmful sexual behaviour team, CAMHS and/or youth offending services.
- c) Refer the child/children to children's social care for a section 17/47 statutory assessment. Where a child is suffering, or is likely to suffer from harm, it is important that a referral to children's social care (and, if appropriate, a report to the police) is made immediately. This referral will be made to children's social care in the area where the/each child lives.
- d) Report alleged criminal behaviour to the police. Alleged criminal behaviour will ordinarily be reported to the police. However, there are some circumstances where it may not be appropriate to report such behaviour to the police. For example, where the exchange of youth involved sexual imagery does not involve any aggravating factors. All concerns or allegations will be assessed on a case-by-case basis, and in light of the wider context.

Risk Assessments

In accordance with the KCSiE guidance, the school will always conduct a risk assessment for:

- any child who is alleged to have behaved in a way that is considered to be abusive or violent;
- any child who has reportedly been abused or affected by the alleged abusive or violent behaviour by another child; or
- any child who may be at risk due to the alleged abusive or violent behaviour by another child as deemed appropriate by the DSL.

The school will always carefully consider whether a risk assessment is required following an allegation of abusive or violent behaviour. In the vast majority of circumstances and where it is possible that such behaviour may be repeated, a risk assessment should be completed.

Where it is alleged that a child has behaved in a way that is considered to be inappropriate or problematic (as opposed to abusive or violent), the DSL will use their professional judgment to determine whether it would be appropriate to contact children's social care and to carry out a risk assessment.

Careful judgment and consideration are required as to whether alleged behaviour which might be judged to be inappropriate by an adult might actually be harmful to another child.

Consultation is recommended with children's social care if there is any doubt about this. Careful consideration should also be given to the context, severity of the alleged behaviour, impact of the alleged behaviour on others, risk to others, and whether there are any patterns of behaviour occurring.

Where other children have been identified as witnesses to alleged abuse or violence, consideration should also be given by the DSL to whether there might be any risks to those children.

In situations where a risk assessment is deemed unnecessary, the school must still take measures to safeguard and support the children involved, continually monitor the situation, and reassess the need for a risk assessment if the level of risk increases.

Information sharing, data protection and record keeping

When responding to concern(s) or allegation(s) of child-on-child abuse, the school will:

- always consider carefully, in consultation with other relevant agencies, how to share information about the concern(s) or allegation(s) with the student(s) affected, their parents, staff, and other students and individuals,
- record the information that is necessary for the school and other relevant agencies (where they are involved) to respond to the concern(s) or allegation(s) and safeguard everyone involved,
- act in accordance with its safeguarding and data protection duties, including those set out in Working Together to Safeguard Children (December 2023) and the HM Government Advice on Information Sharing (May 2024).

Sanctions

The school may wish to consider whether sanctions may be appropriate for any child/children involved. This may be appropriate to:

- ensure that the child/children take(s) responsibility for and realise(s) the seriousness of their behaviour;
- demonstrate to the child/children and others that child-on-child abuse can never be tolerated;
- ensure the safety and wellbeing of other children.

We will support any child who has experienced a sexual assault to remain in school; however, if they are unable to do so, we will facilitate their continued education in an alternative setting. This decision will only be made at the request of the child and their family. If a transfer occurs, we will ensure the new school is informed of the ongoing support required. The DSL will oversee and support this transition.

In the event of a criminal investigation, the child under investigation will be removed from any shared classes with the complainant. Additionally, we will take measures to maintain a reasonable distance between them on school premises. These steps are taken in the best interests of both children and should not be interpreted as a presumption of guilt prior to the conclusion of legal proceedings.

We will work collaboratively with the police. If a criminal investigation into rape or assault by penetration results in a conviction or caution, we will take appropriate action if it has not already been implemented. In almost all cases, such offenses are likely to constitute a severe breach of discipline. This would typically lead to the conclusion that allowing the child to remain in the same school would significantly harm the education or well-being of the abused child and potentially other students.

If a criminal investigation into sexual assault results in a conviction or caution, we may, if not already addressed, implement appropriate sanctions in line with our behaviour policy, including the possibility of permanent exclusion. If the child remains at the school, we will ensure the individuals involved are placed in separate classes and continue to assess the most suitable arrangements to manage potential contact on school premises.

The nature of the conviction or caution, along with the wishes of the abused child, will play a key role in determining how to proceed in such cases. There may be instances where reports of sexual assault or harassment do not result in a police report for various reasons. Additionally, cases of rape, assault by penetration, sexual assault, or harassment that are reported to the police may not progress or may result in a not guilty verdict. This does not mean the incident did not occur or that the child was untruthful. Both parties will have been impacted by the process, and appropriate support will be provided to each as needed.

Review and Action Planning

The school's response to concerns or allegations of child-on-child abuse should be part of on-going proactive work by the school to embed best practice and in taking a whole-school community Contextual Safeguarding approach to such abuse.

This response could also include the school asking itself a series of questions about the context in which an incident of child-on-child abuse occurred in the school, the local community in which the school is based, and the wider physical and online environment - such as:

1. What protective factors and influences exist within the school and how can the school bolster these?
2. How (if at all) did the school's physical environment or the students' routes to and from the school contribute to the abuse, and how can the school address this going forwards?
3. How (if at all) did the online environment contribute to the abuse, and how can the school address this going forwards?
4. Did wider gender norms, equality issues, and/or societal attitudes contribute to the abuse?
5. Does the abuse indicate a need for additional staff training on, for example, underlying attitudes or the handling of particular types of abuse?
6. How have similar cases been managed in the past and what effect has this had?
7. Does the case identify areas for development in the way in which the school works with children to raise their awareness of and/or prevent child-on-child abuse, including by way of the school's PSHE curriculum and lessons that address underlying attitudes or behaviour such as gender and equalities work, respect, boundaries, consent, children's rights and critical thinking and/or avoiding victim-blaming narratives?
8. Are there any lessons to be learnt about the way in which the school engages with parents to address child-on-child abuse issues?

9. Are there underlying issues that affect other schools in the area and is there a need for a multi-agency response?
10. Does this case highlight a need to work with certain children to build their confidence, and teach them how to identify and manage abusive behaviour?
11. Were there opportunities to intervene earlier or differently?

Answers to these questions can be developed into an action plan that is reviewed on a regular basis by the school's leadership and the DSL.
